The Sixth Angel

Mixed Media

Norton Museum of Art Inspiration: Merry-go-Round by Reginald Marsh

This artwork started off as a graphic idea for a hoodie or t-shirt, but after second thought I thought I could plan out the full design and then think about clothing. I saw this album cover that had art on it with the name of, The Fifth Angel and I liked the fiery environment of the scene. I wanted to incorporate that setting into my design, I had made a sketch of some skulls and skeletons with weird guitars, to come to the final idea of the "angel" playing a dragon head as a guitar. I created the different rock formations and lava pools to complement the bright, burning sky. The six in the name refers to the number of the devil or the underworld, that's why I kept such similarity in the names of my art and the album art.
