Norton Museum of Art Inspiration: After All... by Charles Demuth

While visiting the museum I noticed this artwork by Charles Demuth and noticed that he used lines that acted as sun rays. Every time that there was a line the lighting of that specific area would change. For my artwork I decided to make a factory with the same technique of lighting that Demuth used. I wanted this artwork to have something that would represent my theme, which is melting, so for the bottom line I tried to make the buildings melt. My theme of Melting represents the loss of control. I have used this factory to show that they harm our planet and they can possibly lead to the destruction of earth.
