Photography

After visiting the Norton's exhibition featuring Kristen Lee Moolman, I was inspired to create portraits. Moolman's portraiture takes advantage of the natural beauty of simple landscapes like prairies and fields. I decided to take my model to a setting similar and dress her in white to contrast the background of purple flowers. I wanted the background of my photo to be brighter and slightly more muted than the tones of the model herself. The general theme of my image was a community through nature and connecting to earth by submersion.
